Hi Michael

I noticed you just posted about taking over WP Leads. We were considering something along these lines, and I wondered if we could have a quick chat about a joint effort in this regard.

I'm on UK time. Best way to reach me is email.

Stony,

I'm in Cambodia for a few more days and then in my Taiwan office on Friday. You can catch me on Skype via comprock.

On joint forces, I'm interested. I would recommend we fork to Github or get the current repository turned over to me after I discuss it with Otto that the dev isn't responsive.

I'm more after getting the API for MailChimp and PHP Notices issues cleared up. Anything further would be a bonus.

What's your goal?

Michael

Hi Michael

Cambodia sounds great. Presuming it's a holiday - enjoy yourself!

My primary interest in this plugin is it's connection to Salesforce. We sell a Salesforce app, Daddy Analytics, that enhances the information on the Leads in Salesforce that come in through web forms. I'd like to ensure that this plugin's connection to Salesforce works smoothly, and that it's easy for our app to integrate with this plugin.

I'm not a coder myself, so was ready to get our developers to take a look at it, but if you're going to be working on it, perhaps we can help with some of the financial burden if you're doing the coding.

I checked out your website a bit - interesting work you do! I'm just finishing a stint running a non-profit in the UK, trying to help charities use Salesforce's free/discounted database more effectively, so it looks like we're on the same page about helping socially responsible businesses.

I'm bcnstony on Skype, and have just connected to you. Looks like London's 7 hours back, so anytime your late afternoon / evening works great for me.

Stony,

I'm in Kaohsiung now. However, my workload has suddenly grown to the point that I need to put this on hold for 2-4 weeks.

On the compensation side, let's worry about it after I get in and correct the updates for MailChimp. This way, I'll know more about the underlying foundation.

Further, though I've done several TYPO3 and Salesforce integrations, it's been years. Hence, I don't want to throw out a value price before I know more.

In the meantime, can you please tell me any possible specifics that you want to accomplish?

Further, in doing, if I'm not able to get control of the WP Leads plugin, I'll go for a fork and concentrate on Salesforce and MailChimp for now. Focus is good when developing products.

Ciao!

Michael

Hi Michael

A 2-4 week delay sounds like a good idea. We're starting on a Drupal plugin that's doing similar things, and we'll know a lot more about both our needs and the tech after that.

My goal is to use this as a channel for our business, which is an app that requires Salesforce and a webform, and to make integration easy. To that end, simply having two hidden fields on the form for our app is largely enough, plus the Salesforce POST - but that is also fairly easy.

I'm open to forking, too, though think I'll have more impact with an existing plugin.

Mine's mid-November. Trying to be wrapped up on things by mid-October. ;)

Fun is life isn't it.

This is my first, and while I know next to nothing about babies, I'm fairly sure that projectile vomiting and Macbook Air's don't mix. So yes, let's get this wrapped up! I live in a different country to the mother, so I'll be back in the UK (and getting a full night's rest) by Sept 22nd, so anytime after that is good.
